But as usually, no officials, no public, no media do care. Your heart will thank you for it.

Sensing the City Through Television: Urban Identities in Fictional Drama

Kern's authoritative new anthology challenges the myth of haiku as a monkish meditation on the natural world. What we get is a cultural history of Japan up to the end of the 19th century condensed into verse. This feast-like anthology reminds us that poets excelled at social media long before the "floating world" of the internet. Excavations at Bhirrana were remarkable as they placed the beginning of culture at the site around the 6th millennium bce through Carbon determinations, more or less on a par with similar developments in the Baluchistan area, particularly at Mehrgarh.
